How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

During the reporting period, the Fund generated very positive total returns while paying out substantial monthly dividends.

Selling covered calls or covered call spreads allowed the Fund to capture extrinsic time value available for distribution to shareholders while offering a portion of the upside capture.

What Factors Influenced Performance?

The implied volatility of the underlying security plays a significant role in the amount of extrinsic premiums that can be paid by the Fund. During the reporting period, the underlying NFLX implied volatility started out strong over the year, settled back lower, then moved back up towards the end of the year.

As a rule, the higher the implied volatility, the higher the option premiums available for sale and distribution.

As the underlying NFLX performed exceptionally well, NFLY was able to capture a nice portion of that upside.

Since the Fund has downside risk of the underlying, taking in premiums helps offset negative moves where an investor in the Fund would potentially expect to lose less over a period.

Conversely, investors may forgo a portion of the upside which is an expected trade-off in exchange from capturing option premiums.

Positioning of the Fund

The Fund aims to generate high current income for investors looking for alternative yield options in the marketplace with the ability to sell covered calls and/or covered call spreads, all while having the ability to capture a portion of the upside movements of the underlying stock.

How has the Fund changed?

Effective September 6, 2024, the Fund will at times opportunistically sell a credit call spread (described below) instead of selling a call option (i.e., the standard strategy) when ZEGA Financial, LLC (the Sub-Adviser) believes doing so will be more advantageous to the Fund's total return.
